This year, we are lucky to have renowned photographer Mike Beedell who will give a multi-media presentation on his Arctic explorations.

Mike has been a contract photographer for over three decades, producing outstanding imagery for a broad cross-section of clients including corporations, government agencies, publishers and magazines. He is a versatile individual with a skill-set that allows him to capture the drama of a climb at seven thousand meters in – 40 C temperatures or dive into the ocean depths to document the behaviour of whales and sharks or create compassionate images in a hospital environment for an educational brochure and C.D. Mike's work has been featured in many of the world's finest magazines. His photographs have been exhibited throughout the world in many traveling exhibitions and at World Expos and on the Jumbotron in New York city. The Mike Beedell Photo Library has over 500,000 images from across the globe and the library houses one of the finest Arctic collections.

Archives Volunteer Showcase

Date and Time: Saturday, November 22 10:00 am - 1:00 pm

Address: 21 Madawaska Street

The Arnprior and McNab/Braeside Archives (AMBA) is opening its doors—and its vault—for a special Volunteer Showcase on Saturday, November 22, from 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. at the archives located inside the Arnprior Public Library. This free, drop-in event invites the public to explore the remarkable stories, collections, and people behind this award-winning community archives.

Visitors will have an opportunity to explore volunteer-led projects and see archival treasures including glass-plate negatives, photographs, maps, Renfrew County land records, scrapbooks, and other historical documents that bring the region's past to life.

The Showcase will feature the launch of a new online exhibit: "Charles Macnamara: Arnprior's Citizen Scientist" spearheaded by volunteer Laurie Dougherty. A pioneering naturalist and photographer, the exhibit highlights Macnamara's legacy and connection to the land, offering a window into both scientific exploration and local history.

Another highlight will be a presentation from AMBA's archivist Janis Hernandez who will have returned from the International Archives Congress in Barcelona, Spain—an honour extended to only a few archival professionals from Canada. The trip was 100% funded following a fundraising effort that saw local service organizations, businesses and individuals donate.

For those interested in genealogy, a collection of family histories will be accessible. Volunteers are planning a demo of Ancestry.ca and will be available to provide advice whether you're just getting started on your family tree or deep into your ancestral research.

"So much of what the Archives does happens quietly behind the scenes by a dedicated group of volunteers," says Sara MacKenzie, President of the AMBA Board. "This event is a chance for the public to discover the incredible work our team does every day to preserve and make accessible local history. Whether you want to explore, ask a question, or just see what's in the vault, we'd love to see you!"

Learn more about the archives, search the collections and see online exhibitions anytime at www.adarchives.org.
